

Suresh is a principal research systems architect within Pervasive Technology Institute of Indiana University. Suresh is an avid advocate of open community and open source software. He is a nominated Member of the Apache Software Foundation and vice-president of Apache Airavata project. Suresh is an active investigator on cyberinfrastructure grants with a broad research interests at the intersection of application domain science; high performance computing and distributed systems. His current research focus is to investigate next generation science gateway and workflow systems to support interactive, adaptive and dynamic needs of exploratory science.